The attendance was reported good. Our people were very anxious as to Belle's success among strangers, yet she will have the sympathy and confidence of the public should she fail in her present undertaking.

Billy Mayhew, the owner of the building occupied by Black's dining room, a colored man, stepped into the building on Thursday morning and held a conversation with its owner, a Mrs. Black. During the same Mayhew's wife was rather severely handled by the tongue of Mrs. Black, which was engaged Mayhew that he was a terrible thumping. A colored man named Henderson, one of the detailed police at the Fair Grounds, grabbed Mayhew, when Mrs. Black broke several plates upon Mayhew's head. Billy turned upon Henderson and succeeded in cleaning him out. Deputy Marshal Green Wilson put in about this time and marched Mayhew to his honor's quarters, when he pleaded guilty and was fined $1 and costs. Mrs. Black left as much when called in for her part.

The audience seemed beside themselves with rage; they hurled missiles on the stage before the curtain rose, and the players were relentlessly hissed. "The row," said the Times, "was a stupid row, showing not only the illiberality of the rioters, but their paucity of invention. In the old O. P. times there was some humor. A good joke now and then found its way into the uproar; but this was a long, dull, dismal display of nationality which was effective from the moment that the intended performances, and before long a cabal was formed to prevent this and further attempts on the part of foreigners to interfere with native talent. The scene which followed the reopening of the theater can hardly be described.
